INTEREST OF AMICI¹

Amicus Pennsylvania Pregnancy Wellness Collaborative (“Collaborative”) is composed of multiple faith-based pregnancy centers that provide free and low-cost services for Pennsylvania residents. PPWC advances the work of these pregnancy help organizations in Pennsylvania by providing a unified voice for pregnancy centers.

Amicus New Jersey Right to Life Committee, Inc. (NJRTL) is the state’s largest and most active pro-life, non-partisan organization dedicated to protecting and fostering the most basic value of our society – human life.

Amicus the National Institute of Family and Life Advocates (NIFLA) is a national legal network for pro-life pregnancy resource centers and medical clinics and provides legal training, consultation, and education to its 1,800 member centers (including centers in New Jersey), over 1,500 of which operate as medical clinics.

Collectively, Amici’s interest in submitting this brief is to demonstrate that the kind of targeting to which First Women’s Resource Centers, Inc., has been subject is far from an isolated event; indeed, it is the product of increasing weaponized state action taken to unconstitutionally shut down the morally and religiously motivated speech and conduct in which these organizations engage.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

“Abortion presents a profound moral issue on which Americans hold sharply conflicting views. Some believe fervently that a human person comes into being at conception and that abortion ends an innocent life.” Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Org., 597 U.S. 215, 223-24 (2022).

Amici, like Petitioner in this case, are non-profit entities that, for moral and religious reasons, are among those described by the Supreme Court who believe in the sanctity of human life from the moment of conception. They have devoted their time, energy, and resources to promoting and preserving human life, both protecting prenatal humans from destruction by abortion and protecting their mothers from the various harms abortion inflicts upon them. Yet, these deeply held moral and religious views and the work that they inform are under grave attack, not just in the instant case, but in instances increasingly occurring across the nation.

At issue in this case is an unabashed intimidation and targeting of pro-life pregnancy centers on the part of the New Jersey Attorney General through government action. While the State may wish to promote a pro-abortion agenda, it has no constitutional authority to censor and permanently silence non-governmental voices purely because they dissent from that agenda. Pro-life organizations have the constitutionally protected right to engage in pro-life speech that departs from a government’s pro-abortion stance. Agency for Int’l Dev. v. All. for Open Soc’y Int’l, Inc., 570 U.S. 205, 213 (2013) (It is a “basic First Amendment principle that ‘freedom of speech prohibits the government from telling people what they must say.’” (quoting Rumsfeld v. F. for Acad. & Institutional Rts., Inc., 547 U.S. 47, 61 (2006))); see also Hurley v. Irish-American Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Grp. of Boston, 515 U.S. 557, 573 (1995) (“[A] speaker has the autonomy to choose the content of his own message.”).

ARGUMENT

Pregnancy Resource Centers (PRCs) are generally faith-based non-profit organizations, most of which provide free assistance to millions of women, children, and families annually, including hundreds of thousands of free ultrasounds each year (nearly 547,000 in 2022)² along with medical services, education, and referrals. In New Jersey alone, PRCs helped “35,138 women, men, youth, and families in 2019, [by] providing free services and materials valued at nearly $3 million.”³ These services “included 5,614 free ultrasounds performed by registered nurses or medical sonographers and 9,431 free pregnancy tests.”⁴

Also in 2019, over 10,000 licensed medical professionals served as paid or volunteer workers in 2,700 PRCs across the United States.⁵ Thousands more people serve voluntarily at PRCs on an annual basis.⁶ In fact, PRCs save taxpayers countless millions of dollars each year because of the services that they provide for free—through the work of volunteers and the support of donors—that would otherwise have to be provided by government agencies through publicly funded programs.⁷

These PRCs, and the medical professionals and workers that staff them, also provide invaluable information and resources that help ensure that a woman is fully aware of all the facts and options available to her—allowing her to make a true choice. Consistent with their moral and religious views that pre-born life is sacred and valuable, PRCs provide facts about abortion, including the fact that abortion is an act that is intended to end the life of a pre-born child,⁸ and that abortion is a grave, gruesome, and irreversible act.⁹ The descriptions of abortion procedures in Gonzales show how gruesome these procedures can be. 550 U.S. at 134. “Abortion methods vary depending to some extent on the preferences of the physician and, of course, on the term of the pregnancy and the resulting stage of the unborn child's development." Id. (describing the variations in method). For example, [t]he most common [surgical] first-trimester abortion method is vacuum aspiration (otherwise known as suction curettage) in which the physician vacuums out the embryonic tissue [In a D&E abortion, t]he doctor, often guided by ultrasound, inserts grasping forceps through the woman's cervix and into the uterus to grab the fetus. The doctor grips a fetal part with the forceps and pulls it back through the cervix and vagina, continuing to pull even after meeting resistance from the cervix. The friction causes the fetus to tear apart. For example, a leg might be ripped off the fetus as it is pulled through the cervix and out of the woman. The process of evacuating the fetus piece by piece continues until it has been completely removed.

Id. at 134-36.

Further,

[s]ome doctors, especially later in the second trimester, may kill the fetus a day or two before performing the surgical evacuation. They inject digoxin or potassium chloride into the fetus, the umbilical cord, or the amniotic fluid. Fetal demise may cause contractions and make greater dilation possible. Once dead, moreover, the fetus' body will soften, and its removal will be easier. . . . The abortion procedure that was the impetus for the numerous bans on “partial-birth abortion,” including the Act, is a variation of this standard D&E.

Id. at 136 (describing the practice of abortion by injection before the surgical intervention). A nurse’s testimony before Congress describes the gruesomeness of these procedures:

“Dr. Haskell went in with forceps and grabbed the baby’s legs and pulled them down into the birth canal. Then he delivered the baby’s body and the arms—everything but the head. The doctor kept the head right inside the uterus. . . .

“The baby’s little fingers were clasping and unclasping, and his little feet were kicking. Then the doctor stuck the scissors in the back of his head, and the baby’s arms jerked out, like a startle reaction, like a flinch, like a baby does when he thinks he is going to fall.

“The doctor opened up the scissors, stuck a high-powered suction tube into the opening, and sucked the baby’s brains out. Now the baby went completely limp. . . .

“He cut the umbilical cord and delivered the placenta. He threw the baby in a pan, along with the placenta and the instruments he had just used.”

Id. at 138-39.

A woman’s decision regarding abortion should be fully informed and should be made only after careful consideration of all the facts. Planned Parenthood of Se. Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 882 (1992) (plurality opinion) (“[E]nsur[ing] that a woman apprehend[s] the full consequences of her decision . . . reduce[s] the risk that a woman may elect an abortion, only to discover later, with devastating psychological consequences, that her decision was not fully informed.”); accord Planned Parenthood of Cent. Mo. v. Danforth, 428 U.S. 52, 67 (1976) (“The decision to abort, indeed, is an important, and often a stressful one, and it is desirable and imperative that it be made with full knowledge of its nature and consequences.”).

In pro-abortion states, the moral and religious objections that these PRCs have to abortion, and their determination to share information regarding the negative consequences of abortion, may be at odds with the views of state lawmakers and officials who are pursuing a policy of abortion on demand.¹⁰

While this has long been true, after this Court’s decision in Dobbs, where it rightly rejected a PRCs and target them for investigations and censorship of their morally and religiously motivated pro-life speech.

C. If This Court Declines to Hear This Case, It Will Embolden Other Pro-Abortion Attorneys General to Take Similar State Action Against PRCs to Shut Down Dissenting Pro-Life Voices.

While some of the states' actions described above have undergone or are currently undergoing legal challenges, they serve to illustrate a pervasive effort on the part of pro-abortion state governments to target PRCs with action that serves to, among other things, chill their morally and religiously informed speech concerning abortion.⁸³

Legislative efforts to regulate the pro-life speech of PRCs have been met with legal challenges, which has been noticed by states attempting to pass legislation similar to those already being challenged in other states. For example, in a recent legal opinion authored by the New Jersey State Legislature’s Office of Legislative Services (OLS), the OLS noted that “A861 is particularly similar to the overturned Illinois statute, as well as the Massachusetts, Vermont, and North Carolina bills, in seeking to regulate the speech of crisis pregnancy centers using consumer fraud laws.”⁸⁴

In that opinion, the OLS concluded that “A861 [which] prohibits nonprofit, pro-life crisis pregnancy centers from making false or misleading advertisements or other such communications about abortion,”⁸⁵ would “likely be ruled unconstitutional, due to it not being narrowly tailored, or serving a compelling interest that is actually, and not hypothetically, under threat by false or misleading crisis pregnancy center speech.”⁸⁶

In supporting this conclusion, the OLS reasoned that “A861 potentially implicates the right of free speech . . . under the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, in that it seeks to regulate certain speech based on its content . . . and the identity of its speaker (i.e., a ‘crisis pregnancy center’),”⁸⁷ and that one of the limitations on A861 passing constitutional muster is that it likely does not regulate commercial speech:

In Greater Balto., 879 F.3d at 106, 108, the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the plaintiff, a nonprofit crisis pregnancy center that advertised the services it offered without “expressly broadcast[ing] its religious opposition to abortion,” was not engaging in commercial speech because “[a] morally and religiously motivated offering of free services cannot be described as a bare ‘commercial transaction.’”⁸⁸

This OLS opinion demonstrates some of the constitutional defects of legislation to limit and silence the pro-life speech of PRCs. It also demonstrates why pro-abortion attorneys general may attempt to use strategies similar to the ones at issue in this case, especially if the lower court’s ruling is allowed to stand and PRCs are limited in their ability to legally challenge unconstitutional restrictions on their morally and religiously motivated speech in opposition to abortion.

Pro-abortion states and officials have multiple ways to advance their pro-abortion agenda. Trampling on the First Amendment’s guarantee of free speech and religion, under the false guise of enforcing consumer fraud laws, is not one of them.
