RE: How to Hold the Islamic State Responsible for Its Genocidal Acts in Iraq and Mobilise the International Community to Assist Iraq as Needed in Aiding the Victims of Genocide

Your Excellency:

By way of introduction, the European Centre for Law and Justice (ECLJ) is an international not-for-profit law firm located in Strasbourg, France, dedicated to protecting human rights and religious freedom in Europe and around the world. The ECLJ holds Special Consultative Status as an NGO before the United Nations (U.N.). The ECLJ has submitted both written and oral statements to the United Nations Human Rights Council on this very subject. The ECLJ submits this correspondence on behalf of itself and its members — as well as over 536,000 persons, including persons residing in 191 nations and territories — who urge the international community to end the ongoing Islamic State (commonly referred to as ISIS, ISIL, and Daesh) genocide and protect the victims.

We begin by thanking you for taking the crucial first step in providing relief to those Christians and other religious minorities experiencing genocide by sending correspondence to the U.N. Secretary-General and President of the U.N. Security Council requesting, “international assistance in Daesh accountability process.” In your letter, you stated:

The crimes committed by the terrorist organization ISIL against civilians and its destruction of infrastructure and antiquities in Iraq are crimes against humanity. It is therefore important to bring to justice, in accordance with Iraqi law, the members of the terrorist gangs of ISIL who have committed such crimes.

In view of the above, we call on you to ask the international community to provide assistance, so that we can make use of international expertise in our effort to prosecute the terrorist entity ISIL. The Republic of Iraq and the United Kingdom will work together to present a draft resolution in that regard. However, Iraq must maintain its national sovereignty and retain jurisdiction, and its laws must be respected, both when negotiating and implementing the resolution.

I should like to thank you for your diligent efforts to combat terrorism and to reiterate that we are prepared to cooperate with you in that regard¹.

In a most welcome development, on 21 September 2017, the U.N. Security Council answered your call and unanimously adopted Resolution 2379 calling for the creation of an Investigative Team headed by a Special Adviser for the purpose of “collecting, preserving, and storing evidence in Iraq of acts that may amount to war crimes, crimes against humanity, and genocide committed by the terrorist group ISIL (Da’esh) in Iraq”². Such evidence will then be used to hold Islamic State members “accountable for their crimes in Iraq”³.

This is a vital step in providing the relief that Christians and other religious minorities in Iraq so desperately need and the justice they most assuredly deserve. It is also a crucial step in sending the message that such barbaric behaviour will not be tolerated by the international community. As you well know, in order to successfully prosecute the perpetrators of genocide, the evidence supporting the prosecution must first be collected. Islamic State members have killed Christians and Yazidis by the thousands, have enslaved and raped thousands more because of their religion, and have destroyed their places of worship, their homes, and their livelihoods⁴.

The momentum is building to bring to justice to the perpetrators of these genocidal atrocities. We have received, and continue to receive, direct responses from key nation-states acknowledging the need for international intervention to stop the Islamic State genocide, to help the victims, and to bring the heinous criminals to justice.

For instance, we received a thoughtful letter from Special Adviser of the Secretary-General on the Prevention of Genocide, HE Adama Dieng, dated 12 September 2017, in which he echoed the importance of collecting and preserving evidence of these atrocities:

[E]fforts to investigate the facts and to bring perpetrators to justice should be prioritized. The most urgent need at the moment is to ensure that potential evidence is protected and that all efforts are made to ensure the integrity of such evidence. This is a challenge that both Iraqi Government and Kurdistan Regional Government authorities are facing. It is essential that there is a proper assessment of the needs of the Iraqi authorities in this regard, with the view of facilitating any necessary technical assistance required as soon as possible⁵.

¹Annex to the Letter Dated 14 August 2017 from the Chargé D’affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Iraq to the United Nations Addressed to the President of the Security Council, S/2017/710 (16 August 2017), <https://undocs.org/S/2017/710>.

⁴GENOCIDE AGAINST CHRISTIANS IN THE MIDDLE EAST, KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS AND IN DEFENSE OF CHRISTIANS (9 Mar. 2016), available at <http://www.stopthechristiangenocide.org/en/resources/Genocide-report.pdf>.

⁵Letter from Adama Dieng, Special Adviser of the Secretary-General on the Prevention of Genocide, to Jay Alan Sekulow & Robert W. Ash, American Center for Law & Justice (12 Sept. 2017), available at <http://media.aclj.org/pdf/LetterFromUN-Re-Genocide-9-12-17.pdf>.

Now, the Security Council has specifically empowered the Secretary-General to appoint a Special Adviser to collect evidence of the genocide being committed against Christians and other religious minorities in Iraq by the Islamic State. At the time that Resolution 2379 was adopted, the Secretary-General was given 60 days to develop and report back to the Security Council Terms of Reference to implement this resolution. That deadline is fast approaching, and the responsibility to protect implicated therein is of paramount importance.

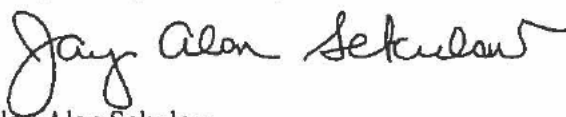

Collecting the evidence and bringing the perpetrators of genocide to justice is critical, but it will also take time. During that process, it is also important that steps be taken to provide resettlement opportunities for the displaced victims. Iraqi Christians have already begun to return home to northern Iraq following the victory over Islamic State fighters, only to have to turn around and leave once again because of continued conflict in the area⁶ or other reasons. Therefore, it is imperative that those seeking to return home have the safety and assistance necessary for resettlement to occur in an effective manner.

Your Excellency, you play a key role in providing relief and resettlement for the victims of genocide. We, therefore, respectfully and solemnly urge you, as the Minister of Foreign Affairs in Iraq, and as you indicated your desire to do in your letter to the U.N., to work with the appointed Special Adviser and to make available all resources possible to aid in the thorough collection of evidence. We urge you to vocalise your support for Iraq to accept the jurisdiction of and prosecutorial investigation by an appropriate international tribunal in the limited context of the Islamic State genocide and other atrocities against Christians, Yazidis, and other religious and ethnic minorities.

To further this end, we are enclosing a legal memorandum providing legal and factual basis for why the Islamic State's atrocities constitute genocide under international law and what steps can and should be taken to protect the victims.

Finally, we respectfully request that you provide to us any suggestions on ways we may assist Iraq in mobilising the international community to end the horrific and deadly acts of genocide and to aid and protect the victims. The Islamic State genocide is bigger than any one nation, and – like you – we believe that action by the international community is necessary in holding the Islamic State accountable for its heinous acts in Iraq. We are aware that there is much to be done and we stand ready to work with you to assist in any way possible.

Respectfully submitted,

Jay Alan Sekulow

I. The International Community Must Recognise the Genocide Against Christians and Other Religious and Ethnic Minorities

The first step the international community must take in order to fulfill its responsibility to protect is to recognise the ongoing atrocities as genocide. The European Union has already made such a declaration by passing a resolution “on the systematic mass murder of religious minorities by the so-called ISIS/Daesh”¹. We continue to strongly and respectfully urge the many different members of the international community who have not already done so to also make such a declaration. We further urge the international community to use its influence and to communicate with all interested and appropriate United Nations organs to request that the United Nations also declare that the Islamic State is committing genocide against Christians and other religious minorities in Iraq. With such a designation, the United Nations could then begin to take the steps necessary to halt the genocide and fulfill its responsibility to protect the innocent victims.

The action we request — declarations of genocide by the international community and by the United Nations — rests on solid ground and precedent. In declaring these acts to be genocide, the United Nations will join the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, the European Parliament, the Holy See’s representative at the U.N. in Geneva as well as Pope Francis, the British House of Commons, the United States Department of State, the United States House of Representatives, the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom, and numerous NGOs — all of which have condemned the Islamic State’s acts and recognised such acts as genocide.

As recognised in the Convention, genocide means any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such:

- (a) Killing members of the group;
- (b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group;
- (c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part;
- (d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group;
- (e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group².

Article III of the Convention identifies the following as punishable acts: “(a) Genocide; (b) Conspiracy to commit genocide; (c) Direct and public incitement to commit genocide; (d) Attempt to commit genocide; (e) Complicity in genocide”³. Article IV makes clear that “Persons committing genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in article III shall be punished, whether they are constitutionally responsible rulers, public officials or private individuals”⁴. Such provisions mean little if the United Nations fails to recognise particular acts as acts of genocide.

The growing body of evidence demonstrates that the inhuman violence at issue is, in fact, genocide as defined by the Convention.

In the summer of 2014, Islamic State leader, Abu Bakr Al-Baghdadi, self-proclaimed to be Caliph Ibrahim, declared the creation of an Islamic caliphate under his leadership. Since Al-Baghdadi declared the creation of his caliphate, the Islamic State has systematically killed Christians, Yazidis, and other non-Muslim as well as Muslim minorities who do not adhere to the Islamic State’s ideology. Islamic State members have killed Christians and Yazidis by the thousands, have enslaved and raped thousands more because of their religion, and have destroyed their places of worship, their homes, and their livelihoods.

In Iraq, Christians represent a small minority of the population, making up less than 3% of the Iraqi population⁵. The Christian population in Iraq has been decimated. In fact, hundreds of thousands of Christians have fled Iraq since the rise of the Islamic State⁶. The Islamic State’s barbarity knows no bounds.

The Islamic State’s religion-based abuses in Iraq include beheadings, burning victims alive in caskets, and other barbaric “killings, rape, kidnapping, enslavement, theft . . . destruction of religious sites . . . sexual slavery, forced conversion, ransom demands, property seizures, and forced business closures”⁷. Islamic State fighters destroyed Iraq’s oldest Christian monastery, St. Elijah’s⁸. Father Paul Thabit Habib, a Catholic priest “who now lives in Kurdish-administered Irbil”, said that Iraq’s “Christian history was ‘being barbarically leveled’”⁹. He added, “[W]e see it as an attempt to expel us from Iraq, eliminating and finishing our existence in this land”¹⁰. Such savagery has been punctuated by evidence that the Islamic State is burning Christians alive in locked caskets¹¹.

Indeed, the Islamic State’s notorious abuses are targeted primarily against religious minorities, including an estimated 200,000 Iraqi Christians in 2014¹². In June 2014, after the Islamic State seized the city of Mosul, Iraq, it demanded that Christian residents either convert to Islam, pay a tax for protection, or be executed; further, the Islamic State gave the Christians less than a week (14 to 19 July) to make their decision¹³. Several important religious sites and Christian institutions in Mosul were destroyed¹⁴.

In June 2014, an Iraqi Christian mother and her daughter were brutally raped by Islamic State members “in front of the husband and father. The husband and father was so traumatized that he committed suicide”¹⁵. Four other Iraqi Christian women were shot to death by members of the Islamic State for not wearing veils¹⁶.

In May 2016, Islamic State members in Mosul, Iraq, burned a twelve-year-old Christian girl to death: The “[j]ihadi fighters had come to claim a religious tax from the girl’s mother . . . but when the mother delayed in paying,”¹⁷ they set fire to the family home while the mother and her daughter were still inside. The “[m]other and child were able to escape the burning building, but the girl had suffered such severe burns that she later died in the hospital”¹⁸.

In June 2016, an Iraqi Christian woman was able to escape from an Islamic State stronghold in Mosul. She described the horrific ways in which Islamic State members use captured Christian women as sex-slaves. She “narrate[d] how Islamic State terrorists ‘married and divorced’ her as many as nine times a night to rape her with ‘justification’”¹⁹. “Another woman was victimized so often that she resorted to defecating on herself to make herself less desirable, and had to be trained to use the bathroom again after she escaped”²⁰. Then, [t]here was Khalia, a woman in her fifties, who was captured and held hostage along with 47 others. During her 15 days in captivity, she rebuffed demands to convert, despite a gun being put to her head and a sword to her neck. She literally fought off ISIS militants as they tried to rape the girls, and again later when they tried to take a 9-year-old as a bride. Because of the abuse, 14 men gave in to ISIS’ demands and said they would convert to Islam. Khalia would not²¹.

One survivor in Iraq recounted how her family-member was told by the Islamic State that, “if you want to live[,] you will need to convert to Islam so we will not hurt you”²². That same survivor also recounted how a nephew defied an Islamic State Sharia Court order not to enter Baghdida by returning “to the city to help the needy Christians in the region and in the third month of 2015 one of the terrorists called me using my nephew’s phone [sic] said forget about Ammar and we lost contact with him to this day”²³.

Another survivor, a blind man, recounted: “They told me to embrace Islam or be killed”²⁴. He also told the story of how the Islamic State kidnapped his daughter and “forced her to become a Muslim and married [sic] one of the gangsters”²⁵.

A mother in Iraq told this story:

On 09/06/2014 Daesh came into the house and searched it. They gave us the choice to convert or leave and if we chose to leave one of the parents will have to remain behind. My husband stayed in Bartella and I saw him restrained and being beaten in the back of a pickup truck. Then they took my 11 month old daughter and threw her on the couch under the pretext of inspection she began to cry and scream. Then looted the house and took cash and gold then took us to their inspection office [where] one of them came to me and said that [] gold coins [were] hidden in a baby’s diaper so they took my baby and threw her against the wall²⁶.

A different woman told how she left her home town “[b]ecause of the shelling and fear of death and rape of women, as we have heard that Daesh committed such acts in Mosul”²⁷. She explained that at 5:00 a.m. on August 7, 2014, “we tried to leave in two cars. However Daesh caught up to [] my brother’s car and forced them to stay in the city”²⁸.

Another Christian in Iraq described his reason for leaving his home: “I left due to the announcement of the leader of Daesh Abu Bakir al-Baghdadi that the Nazarene (that’s how they call the Christians) must leave or pay the ‘tax’ (jizya) or become Muslim or get killed”²⁹. He explained that his family had not left sooner because they had no vehicle and had handicapped persons with them. Ultimately, they hired a taxi to flee, but were stopped by “members of Daesh” who learned that they were “Nazarenes”: “they robbed us, and took everything we had”³⁰. After that, they were dumped on the border “only with the clothes we were wearing and nothing else”³¹.

Yet another Iraqi Christian woman told her story:

They told me when I was in Mosul that I must become a Muslim or leave Mosul so [I] decided to immigrate to Baghdida. After the events of 8/6/14 I stayed in Baghdida because I was sick and one day one of [the] Daesh men named Abo Hasan came to me and wanted to force me to convert to Islam. When I refused, he took me to the Amir and [he] slapped my face and brought a pot and ax and said I’ll slaughter you if you don’t become Muslim. . . . [T]hey took my husband to a room by himself. After 20 days, he tortured us and forced us to leave Baghdida after they took all of our money and goods to the point that the Amir said that he would cut my finger if I don't give him my ring. They moved us to Erbil³².

And consider the story of this man, who specifically mentioned a United Nations' visit to his region:

On 7/27/2014 during the visit to the area by the officials in the Iraqi government, led by the Speaker of Parliament we presented them with what happened to us and asked for their help to no avail. We did the same during the UN visit to the area again to no avail. I feel we are neglected in the refugee camps and no one cares about us like we are not human. We are thankful that you are looking into this and we appreciate any help you can provide in procuring our rights and the rights of all the people in the region³³.

As areas within Iraq have been liberated by Allied forces in recent months, the extent of the genocide against these religious minorities is only now being realised. Mass graves have been exhumed, ancient churches and holy areas have been found in rubble, and the very few survivors who remain have lost everything. For example, in October 2016, when Allied forces began their campaign to liberate the Nineveh region of Iraq from the grip of the Islamic State, some Christian leaders were able to return to their ancient homeland for the first time in over two years. Having fled for their lives when the Islamic State took over the region in 2014, the leaders returned to piles of dust. The 200,000 Christians who resided in the region when the Islamic State brutally took over has now dwindled to 20 to 30 Christian residents. Their places of worship, ancient texts, and congregations have summarily been wiped out by the Islamic State³⁴.

These reports are consistent with the United Nations' own fact-finding. For instance, according to a report issued by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, in Iraq alone:

At least 18,802 civilians have been killed from January 2014 to October 2015.

At least 36,245 civilians have been wounded during that same time period.

An estimated 3,500 are being held as slaves by the Islamic State, most of them women and children.

3.2 million have been displaced³⁵.

The Report concluded: "The violence suffered by civilians in Iraq remains staggering. The so-called 'Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant' (ISIL) continues to commit systematic and widespread violence and abuses of international human rights law and humanitarian law.

These acts may, in some instances, amount to war crimes, crimes against humanity, *and possibly genocide*³⁶. The brutality with which the Islamic State victimises religious minorities is beyond belief. The accounts of the trauma experienced by survivors in Iraq is heartbreaking.

Similarity of Islamic State Atrocities Against Christians and Yazidis

Islamic State treatment of Christians is directly comparable to its treatment of another religious minority, the Yazidis. Much like the Islamic State treatment of Christians in Mosul and Raqqa City, in August 2014, the Islamic State captured a Yazidi village and demanded that its residents convert to Islam. After the villagers refused to convert over a period of several days, Islamic State members executed at least 100 Yazidi men and took the women and children hostage as sex slaves³⁷.

In June 2016 a United Nations-mandated human rights inquiry released its official report “They Came to Destroy: ISIS Crimes against the Yazidis” in which it declared that Genocide has occurred and is ongoing³⁸. The report’s findings were based on interviews with survivors, religious leaders, smugglers, activists, lawyers, medical personnel, and journalists, as well as extensive documentary material, and the evidence led the commission to conclude that the Islamic State had indeed perpetrated genocide against Yazidis in Syria and Northern Iraq. The report stated:

ISIS has committed the crime of genocide as well as multiple crimes against humanity and war crimes against the Yazidis, thousands of whom are held captive in the Syrian Arab Republic where they are subjected to almost unimaginable horrors. . . .

ISIS has sought to destroy the Yazidis through killings; sexual slavery, enslavement, torture and inhuman and degrading treatment and forcible transfer causing serious bodily and mental harm; the infliction of conditions of life that bring about a slow death; the imposition of measures to prevent Yazidi children from being born, including forced conversion of adults, the separation of Yazidi men and women, and mental trauma; and the transfer of Yazidi children from their own families and placing them with ISIS fighters, thereby cutting them off from beliefs and practices of their own religious community, and erasing their identity as Yazidis. The public statements and conduct of ISIS and its fighters clearly demonstrate that ISIS intended to destroy the Yazidis of Sinjar, composing the majority of the world’s Yazidi population, in whole or in part.

Over 3,200 Yazidi women and children are still held by ISIS. Most are in Syria where Yazidi females continue to be sexually enslaved and Yazidi boys, indoctrinated, trained and used in hostilities. Thousands of Yazidi men and boys are missing.

The genocide of the Yazidis is on-going³⁹.

The facts that led to the commission's declaration of genocide against the Yazidis are equally as applicable to Christians and other religious minorities in the region who have endured the same targeted campaign by the Islamic State.

The growing body of evidence demonstrates that the inhuman violence and intentional decimation of a religious group is, in fact, genocide as defined by the Convention. The joint Report of the Knights of Columbus and In Defense of Christians, based on the superior and thorough fact-finding of the Shlomo Organization for Documentation, contains numerous first-hand accounts of genocide survivors and relatives of deceased or missing victims⁴⁰. Again, the evidence is well-documented, and it is sickening. And while acknowledging that estimates may contain inaccuracies or duplication, due to what's known by some as "the fog of war," this valuable source of data emphasised a critical point: "speculation about the accuracy of figures cuts both ways"⁴¹. In their estimation, and in ours, "the numbers are likely to be much higher"⁴².

Virtually every day brings new reports and accounts of the Islamic State's barbarism. Any question as to the genocidal nature of the atrocities committed against Christians and other religious and ethnic minorities has been answered in the affirmative.

International Bodies Recognising Islamic State Genocide Particularly Targeting Christians

In congruence with the internal reports and findings of these United Nation bodies, other international organs have likewise concluded that genocide is occurring at the hands of the Islamic State. For example, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, concluded the following regarding individuals associated with the Islamic State — such persons are individuals who act in the name of the terrorist entity which calls itself "Islamic State" (Daesh) and who have perpetrated acts of genocide and other serious crimes punishable under international law. States should act on the presumption that Daesh commits genocide and should be aware that this entails action under the 1948 United Nations Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide⁴³.

The European Parliament went even further, specifically recognising the genocide of Christians and other religious and ethnic minorities. In a nearly unanimous resolution, it declared:

[W]hereas religious and ethnic minorities, such as Christian (Chaldean/Syriac/Assyrian, Melkite and Armenian), Yazidi, Turkmens, Shabak, Kaka'i, Sabae-Mandean, Kurdish and Shi'a communities, as well as many Arabs and Sunni Muslims, have been targeted by the so-called 'ISIS/Daesh'; whereas many have been killed, slaughtered, beaten, subjected to extortion, abducted and tortured; whereas they have been enslaved (in particular women and girls, who have also been subjected to other forms of sexual violence) and forcibly converted, and have been victims of forced marriage and trafficking in human beings; whereas children have also been forcibly recruited; whereas mosques, monuments, shrines, churches and other places of worship, tombs and cemeteries have been vandalised⁴⁴.

The resolution details several specific incidents in which the Islamic State committed numerous international crimes against Christians and other religious minorities in the Middle East, from the more than 150,000 Iraqi Christians who fled Mosul in August 2014 to the kidnapping of more than 220 Assyrian Christians in February 2015.

Importantly, the European Parliament stresses that the so-called 'ISIS/Daesh' is committing genocide against Christians and Yazidis, and other religious and ethnic minorities, who do not agree with the so-called 'ISIS/Daesh' interpretation of Islam, and that this therefore entails action under the 1948 United Nations Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide⁴⁵.

In its resolution, the European Parliament "urges the members of the UN Security Council to support a referral to the International Criminal Court" and invites the Security Council to take measures for these acts "to be recognized as genocide" by the International Criminal Court.

Finally, the European Parliament stresses the responsibility on the international community to take collective action in order to "provid[e] protection and aid, including military protection and aid, in accordance with international law, to all those targeted by the so-called 'ISIS/Daesh' and other terrorist organizations in the Middle East." The European Parliament submitted the resolution to United Nations bodies, the Organization of Islamic Cooperation, and to the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf.

Following suit, on 17 March 2016, United States Secretary of State John Kerry declared:

Daesh is responsible for genocide against groups in areas under its control, including Yezidis, Christians, and Shia Muslims. Daesh is genocidal by self-proclamation, by ideology, and by actions – in what it says, what it believes, and what it does. Daesh is also responsible for crimes against humanity and ethnic cleansing directed at these same groups and in some cases also against Sunni Muslims, Kurds, and other minorities⁴⁶.

He continued:

We know that in Mosul, Qaraqosh, and elsewhere, Daesh has executed Christians solely because of their faith; that it executed 49 Coptic and Ethiopian Christians in Libya; and that it has also forced Christian women and girls into sexual slavery. . . .

We know that in areas under its control, Daesh has made a systematic effort to destroy the cultural heritage of ancient communities – destroying Armenian, Syrian Orthodox, and Roman Catholic churches; blowing up monasteries and the tombs of prophets; desecrating cemeteries; and in Palmyra, even beheading the 83-year-old scholar who had spent a lifetime preserving antiquities there.

We know that Daesh’s actions are animated by an extreme and intolerant ideology that castigates Yazidis as, quote, “pagans” and “devil-worshippers,” and we know that Daesh has threatened Christians by saying that it will, quote, “conquer your Rome, break your crosses, and enslave your women”⁴⁷.

In April of 2017, the British House of Commons unanimously passed a motion condemning the Islamic State atrocities as genocide and calling for action by the United Nations:

That this House believes that Christians, Yazidis, and other ethnic and religious minorities in Iraq and Syria are suffering Genocide at the hands of Daesh; and calls on the Government to make an immediate Referral to the UN Security Council with a view to conferring jurisdiction upon the International Criminal Court so that perpetrators can be brought to justice⁴⁸.

As indicated above, a growing number of international bodies have recognised that the ongoing atrocities committed by members of the Islamic State constitute genocide against Christians and other religious and ethnic minorities. On this point, there can now be no meaningful dispute.

It is time for the United Nations to not only join, but also to lead the international community in confronting the ongoing genocide. To do so, however, it must first formally recognise the genocide and all its victims. The United Nations Office on Genocide Prevention and the Responsibility to Protect can play a critical role in obtaining that recognition. Other members of the international community must continue to place pressure on the United Nations to take appropriate action.

II. The Alleged Application of Jizya Neither Mitigates Nor Provides a Defense for the Islamic State's Genocide Against Christians.

In explaining its disappointing decision to leave Christians out of its declaration, the Independent International Commission of Inquiry wrote in its Report:

While the Christian communities still living in ISIS-controlled territory live difficult and often precarious existences, are viewed with suspicion, and are vulnerable to attack if ISIS perceive they are seeking protection from non-aligned forces, their right to exist as Christians within any Islamic state existing at any point in time, is recognised as long as they pay the jizya tax⁴⁹.

Such an argument grossly fails to recognise the reality of the Islamic State's perverted beliefs and appreciate how the jizya tax is arbitrarily used against Christians, the difference between the historical understanding of that term and the meaning of the term as applied by the Islamic State⁵⁰, and the full breadth of the threats Christians face at the hands of the Islamic State. The Islamic State's Caliph "Abu Omar al-Baghdadi has admitted for nearly a decade that Christians no longer qualify for the historical protection offered by Islamic law"⁵¹.

According to al-Baghdadi:

We find that the sects of the People of the Book and others from the Sabians and [sic] so in the State of Islam today are people of war who qualify for no protection, for they have transgressed against whatever they agreed to in many countless ways, and if they want peace and security then they must start a new era with the State of Islam according to (Caliph) Omar's stipulations [the historic "Covenant" of Caliph Omar with Christians] that they have annulled⁵².

This explains why the Islamic State's concept of jizya has been described to be "more a Salafi Caliphate publicity stunt than a careful recreation of jizya as practiced by the early Caliphs"⁵³.

Islamic State jihadists have expressed their specific intent to kill all Christians if they do not convert or, sometimes, pay jizya. To the extent the practice of jizya and the protection it entails are honoured by the Islamic State, paying jizya or converting to Islam to avoid death are not meaningful alternatives, as the many Christians who are too poor to pay the tax have no option but to flee their homeland, deny their faith, or die.

For example, "[o]ne Christian farmer from Aleppo province fled recently after more than a year of living under Islamic State rule, saying the heavy taxation stripped him of his livelihood”⁵⁴. The suggestion that the alleged availability of jizya converts genocidal actions designed to decimate a particular group into non-genocidal actions or that jizya constitutes, in essence, a defense to the charge of genocide, is misguided, naïve, grotesque, and wrong.

Reliance on jizya to deny genocide also fails under international law. Forcible conversion coupled with destruction of Christian places of worship are acts that by their very nature are intended to destroy Christians as a religious group. Destruction of places of worship is generally “designed to annihilate the centuries-long presence of the group”⁵⁵. If Christians succumb to forced conversion, there will be no such group called Christians in Iraq. If they do not convert and refuse (or are unable) to pay jizya, they will be killed. Either way, Christians as a religious group will cease to exist in the region — a clearly stated and demonstrated goal of the Islamic State. Moreover, just because the Islamic State may allow some Christians to pay jizya to spare their lives does not negate Islamic State actors’ intent to destroy Christians as a religious group. The fact that some Christians have not been killed does not legitimise the many instances where thousands have been killed.

Furthermore, international law does not require that the targeted group be destroyed completely in order for it to constitute genocide. Intending to destroy the targeted group “in part” fully suffices⁵⁶. As such, one cannot legitimately claim that, because some Christians can, allegedly, save their lives by paying jizya, the Islamic State is not engaged in the genocide of Christians. A substantial number of Christians have already been killed. More will be killed if they either decline to pay or cannot pay jizya. Converting to Islam, paying jizya, or suffering death, all amount to “[d]eliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part” under subparagraph (c) of the Genocide Convention’s definition of genocide.

The jizya tax is a devious tactic of the Islamic State used to extort money from Christians, often right before they turn around and murder those same Christians or expel them from their homeland. Jizya should never be legitimised, especially by an international legal body holding itself out as a bastion of peace and security.

III. The United Nations Must Fulfill Its Solemn and Well Established “Responsibility to Protect”

Once the United Nations as an organisation recognises the genocide as such, then it may properly mobilise the international community to honour the terms of the Genocide Convention and fulfill its responsibility to protect. The Security Council can play a significant role in mobilising the international community.

According to the Genocide Convention, “[t]he Contracting Parties confirm that genocide . . . is a crime under international law which they undertake to prevent and punish”⁵⁷. The Convention makes clear that “the competent organs of the United Nations” have a responsibility “to take such action under the Charter of the United Nations as they consider appropriate for the prevention and suppression of acts of genocide.” According to the Office of the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide, “[t]he duty to prevent and halt genocide and mass atrocities lies first and foremost with the State, but the international community has a role”⁵⁸.

Indeed, this role — the “responsibility to protect” — was stipulated “in the Outcome Document of the 2005 United Nations World Summit (A/RES/60/1, para. 138-140), and formulated in the Secretary-General’s 2009 Report (A/63/677) on Implementing the Responsibility to Protect.” As the U.N. Secretary-General’s office has recognised and as has been adopted by the General Assembly:

*The international community, through the United Nations, also has the responsibility to use appropriate diplomatic, humanitarian and other peaceful means, in accordance with Chapters VI and VIII of the Charter, to help to protect populations from genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity. In this context, we are prepared to take collective action, in a timely and decisive manner, through the Security Council, in accordance with the Charter, including Chapter VII, on a case-by-case basis and in cooperation with relevant regional organizations as appropriate, should peaceful means be inadequate and national authorities are manifestly failing to protect their populations from genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity. We stress the need for the General Assembly to continue consideration of the responsibility to protect populations from genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity and its implications, bearing in mind the principles of the Charter and international law. We also intend to commit ourselves, as necessary and appropriate, to helping States build capacity to protect their populations from genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity and to assisting those which are under stress before crises and conflicts break out*⁵⁹.

It is this responsibility and obligation that we urge the United Nations to advance forthwith by first recognising the ongoing atrocities as genocide, then by mobilizing along with other appropriate organs of the United Nations to take action. Iraq itself has recognized the need for “the international community to provide assistance” in “bring[ing] to justice, in accordance with Iraqi law, the member of the terrorist gangs of [the Islamic State]”⁶⁰. The estimated number of genocide victims demonstrates the overwhelming nature of such a task. Even while military efforts against the Islamic State continue, the Islamic State continues its genocide with staggering consistency.

IV. The United Nations Must Implement All Available Means to Stop the Genocide and Protect the Victims

That the ongoing atrocities against Christians and other religious and ethnic minorities constitute genocide and that the United Nations and its organs possess the responsibility to protect as concerns that genocide is clear. We now turn to specific means uniquely available to the United Nations to implement its responsibility and give meaning to the Convention.

We respectfully call to attention that, pursuant to the Charter of the United Nations, the very purpose of the United Nations is to “maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace”⁶¹. And, the Charter vests the Security Council with the authority to take non-military action in an effort to restore peace and security⁶².

As recognised by the Genocide Convention, prosecution plays a critical role in halting genocide. In addition to state tribunals that can try persons who commit acts of genocide in a specific state, the Convention provides that persons can be tried in any “international penal tribunal as may have jurisdiction with respect to those Contracting Parties which shall have accepted its jurisdiction”⁶³. Iraq is a contracting party to the Genocide Convention, and has not made any reservations or declarations.

There are two actions that the Security Council in particular may take to create a penal tribunal with the necessary jurisdiction: (1) refer Islamic State members’ crimes of genocide to the International Criminal Court (ICC); or (2) create an ad hoc tribunal for prosecuting such crimes (as was done for the Former Yugoslavia and Rwanda). Importantly, both avenues require Security Council action.

The first available avenue, the ICC, would only have jurisdiction if the United Nations Security Council specifically makes the referral⁶⁴. The ICC does not automatically possess jurisdiction to try Islamic State members and the genocide committed in Iraq because Iraq is not a signatory to the Rome Statute and Islamic State members are not state actors⁶⁵. Accordingly, Iraq may accept the jurisdiction of the ICC, or the Security Council must specifically refer such a matter to the ICC in order to vest the ICC with the requisite jurisdiction and the ability to prosecute⁶⁶.

Second, the Security Council could create an “ad hoc tribunal” to prosecute Islamic State members committing genocide. This mechanism was utilised by the Security Council “to prosecute international criminal violations during the 1994 genocide in Rwanda and [again to prosecute] the international criminal violations that occurred during the struggles in the former Yugoslavia in the early 1990s”⁶⁷. Unfortunately, the need for such a tribunal is present once again.

Whichever avenue is chosen, it is clear that the Security Council is vested with the authority to initiate prosecution. In its resolution, the European Parliament “urges the members of the U.N. Security Council to support a referral to the International Criminal Court” and invites the Security Council to take measures for these acts “to be recognized as genocide” by the International Criminal Court⁶⁸. We concur with the European Parliament in this regard and, again, we have respectfully urged the Security Council to recognise these acts of genocide as such, and ensure a vigorous prosecution.

* * * * *

The Islamic State’s systematic pattern of widespread murder and sexual abuse has forced thousands of Christians to flee from Iraq. These acts are leading to the wholesale destruction of Christians as a group in the region. Massive deportations, widespread killings, and countless rapes may be construed as steps in the process of “gradual weakening of the population” that will result in a religious cleansing of all Christians from Islamic State-controlled territories⁶⁹. “[M]urder, sexual assault, intimidation, harassment, and the destruction of sacred and cultural buildings” are specific methods of cleansing an area of an unwanted group⁷⁰. As such, “[t]he number of the victims selected only because of their membership in a group . . . lead[s] to the conclusion that an intent to destroy the group, at least in part, [is] present”⁷¹. Without international intervention designed to end this slaughter — to paraphrase the words of former United States Permanent Representative to the United Nations Ambassador Samantha Power — the world will become “no more than witnesses at a funeral”⁷² of thousands of Christians and thousands of years of the world’s most important history.

The United Nations must stand against the evils of the ongoing genocide and use all available options to stop the genocide and protect the victims — by implementing appropriate penal tribunals, coordinating a more effective use of coalition military force, administering a more efficient delivery of aid, and providing meaningful in-region protection for victims such as the establishment of safe-zones. The Charter of the United Nations demands no less, and through the organs of the United Nations, equipped and empowered by the Genocide Convention, the United Nations has the unique capability, and the responsibility, to end the genocide and protect the Christians and other religious and ethnic minorities victimised thereby.
