

List of contributors to the “Abortion care guideline” cited in the WHO/HRP document

To develop the 2022 “Abortion care guideline”,¹ the WHO consulted 121 experts² from outside the organization.³ However, 81 of these “experts,” or nearly 67%, either worked for or were activists promoting abortion, or were paid by private abortion organizations. For example, 11 of these experts received nearly $1,800,000 over the course of their careers from the *Society of Family Planning & SFP Researcher Fund*⁴ (funded in 2020 to the tune of US$3,024,868 by the Susan Thompson Buffett Foundation).⁵ Of the 142 people who worked on the guidelines⁶ (including members of the WHO Steering Group and the WHO Secretariat), 91 have an activist profile (64%). For example, 12 worked for IPAS, 7 for the Population Council, and 4 for the Center for Reproductive Rights.

The drafting of the guidelines unfolded in several steps, in different working and drafting groups. Of the eighteen experts in the Guideline Development Group (GDG), fourteen have been pro-abortion advocates, either through their publications, public statements, or through the organizations they work for.⁷ With one exception, these experts are also members of the Evidence and Recommendation Review Group (ERRG), which is divided into three groups: Clinical services domain ERRG, Service delivery domain ERRG and Law and policy domain ERRG.

Of the remaining twelve ERRG members (non-GDG members), nine have the same activist profile.⁸ In addition, out of the six other Human Rights advisors (non-GDG members), who contributed to the Law and Policy ERRG, three also have an activist profile.⁹ Similarly, the human rights advisor for the GDG meeting and the three ERRG meetings is lobbyist Christina Zampas.¹⁰ She is the associate director of global advocacy at the Center for Reproductive Rights. A total of thirty-six people participated in the ERRG that resulted in the WHO “Abortion care guideline.” Twenty-three of these thirty-six people were linked to pro-abortion NGOs, and no one from a NGO preventing abortion was consulted. In total, out of the thirty-six experts consulted, at least twenty-eight have an abortion activist profile.¹¹

The review of the guidelines was also conducted by activists. Out of the nine members of the external review group, seven have an activist profile.¹² And the five external partners who provided feedback on the draft guideline are all abortion activists working for abortion activist NGOs.¹³

WHO also formed three Evidence Synthesis Teams, which prepared the GRADE (Grading of Recommendations Assessment, Development and Evaluation) systematic reviews. In the Clinical services domain group, 28 out of 37 members are activists, in the Service delivery domain group,¹⁴ 11 out of 24 members are activists¹⁵ and, in the Law and policy domain group, 9 out of 11 members are activists.¹⁶ Thus, at least 67% of the Evidence Synthesis Teams' members are publicly pro-abortion. Three of the four members of the GDG meeting observers are also pro-abortion activists.¹⁷ One of them, Patricia Lohr, received $112,309 in 2012 from the *Society of Family Planning & SFP Researcher Fund*¹⁸ for a study titled “Effect of intracardiac potassium chloride for feticide before dilatation and evacuation on procedure duration and outcomes.”

The guidelines were written by Fiona de Londras, Bela Ganatra, Heidi Johnston, Caron Kim, Antonella Lavelanet, Jane Patten, and Maria Rodriguez, all well-known abortion activists. For example, Fiona de Londras is a radical activist, author of numerous pro-abortion articles, and intervened before the U.S. Supreme Court to that extent.

The eight members of the *WHO Steering Group*¹⁹ and eight of the nineteen members of the *WHO Secretariat*²⁰ who provided administrative support for the drafting of the guidelines are also activists. They include Bela Ganatra, who was Senior Advisor to IPAS between 2001 and 2010,²¹ Chilanga Asmani, who worked for the International Planned Parenthood Federation between 2013 and 2019,²² and Ian Askew, who held senior positions at the Population Council between 1990 and 2015,²³ and between 2016 and 2022 was Director of the WHO Department of Sexual and Reproductive Health and Research, which includes the HRP.²⁴

Definition: The qualification “abortion activist” is attributed to a contributor of the “Abortion care guideline” when their scientific publications, their public expression or the NGO in which they work contribute to the liberalization of abortion. Several activists are involved in several different working groups (highlighted in grey).
