MOTION OF LEGISLATIVE SUPPORTERS OF SB 23 FOR LEAVE TO FILE AMICUS
CURIAE BRIEF REGARDING THE SCOPE OF RELIEF

Amici are Representatives Ronald Hood and Candice Keller, lead sponsors of the House version of Senate Bill 23, the legislation that became the Human Rights and Heartbeat Protection Act, and supporters of the final, adopted Senate version. This case entails a constitutional challenge to a part of that legislation. Amici legislators respectfully submit this motion for leave to file an amicus brief regarding the scope of judicial relief in this matter. (The proposed brief does not address the COVID-19 portion of this lawsuit.) In support of this Motion, the legislative amici rely on the accompanying Memorandum in Support, attached hereto and incorporated by reference. In short, SB 23 contains over a dozen different provisions, while the challenge by plaintiffs focuses exclusively on just one of them, the ban on abortions after detection of fetal heartbeat in Ohio Revised Code Sec. 2919.195(A). Yet the preliminary injunction this Court entered (Doc. 29) enjoins “S.B. 23” without distinguishing the various provisions such as the creation of a legislative committee on adoption or new abortion reporting requirements. Amici wish to alert this Court to the need to specify, in any relief granted, precisely what provision or provisions of SB 23 the injunction or judgment affects. Amici have notified the parties of amici’s intent to file this motion. Plaintiffs do not oppose the motion. Defendants have not responded to amici's request for their position on the motion.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF THE MOTION OF LEGISLATIVE SUPPORTERS OF SB 23 FOR LEAVE TO FILE AMICUS CURIAE BRIEF
REGARDING THE SCOPE OF RELIEF

I. THE LEGISLATIVE SUPPORTERS OF SB 23 HAVE A CLEAR INTEREST IN ENSURING THAT, AT A MINIMUM, THE UNCHALLENGED PORTIONS OF THEIR LEGISLATIVE PRODUCT GO INTO EFFECT.

Amici are Representatives Ronald Hood and Candice Keller, lead sponsors of the House version of Senate Bill 23, the legislation that became the Human Rights and Heartbeat Protection Act, and supporters of the final, adopted Senate version. Rep. Keller was also a cosponsor of SB 23. The current lawsuit includes a challenge to part of the broader legislative package adopted in SB 23, namely, the ban on abortions after detection of fetal heartbeat enacted as Sec. 2919.195(A). (The proposed brief does not address the COVID-19 portion of this lawsuit.) Amici have a keen interest in seeing that as much of their legislative handiwork as possible be upheld and allowed to go into effect. Amici legislators should be granted leave to file an amicus curiae brief in this case addressing the scope of judicial relief to be granted. The legislation in question, Senate Bill (SB) 23 (<https://www.legislature.ohio.gov/legislation/legislation-summary?id=GA133-SB-23>), contained various legislative provisions, including:

- Amending Sec. 2317.56(C)(2) to remove the special privilege of the private organization ACOG having a mandatory consultation role in the formulation of informed consent materials for abortion;
- Amending Sec. 2919.171(A) & (D) regarding reporting requirements for abortions in Ohio;
- Amending Sec. 2919.19's definition section and adding provisions regarding severability and the resuscitation of provisions should judicial abortion rules relax in future decisions;
- Adding a new Sec. 2919.191 to limit the reach of the bill to intrauterine pregnancies;
- Renumbering prior Sec. 2919.191 as 2919.192 and in that section adding mandates for the director of health regarding rules for determining the presence of a fetal heartbeat and amending the law governing the methods for determining the presence of a fetal heartbeat to enhance accuracy;
- Replacing prior Sec. 2919.191(B) with a new and amended Sec. 2919.193 requiring testing for the presence of a fetal heartbeat prior to any abortion (except in case of medical emergency) and specifying recordkeeping requirements;
- Renumbering Sec. 2919.192 as 2919.194 and amending this section on informed consent to require the pregnant woman to sign a form acknowledging receipt of the information;
- Adding a new Sec. 2919.195 to ban abortions after detection of a fetal heartbeat (except in case of medical emergency) and specifying that this provision does not repeal or limit other abortion restrictions;
- Adding a new Sec. 2919.196 requiring reporting on whether the abortion is done for maternal health (or not);

- Adding a new Sec. 2919.197 explicitly excluding contraceptive measures from the scope of the law;
- Adding a new Sec. 2919.199 creating a civil remedy for post-abortion women;
- Adding a new Sec. 2919.1910 creating a joint legislative committee on adoption;
- Adding a new Sec. 2919.1912 authorizing the state medical board to impose forfeitures for violations of various of the foregoing provisions;
- Amending Sec. 4731.22(B)(47) to conform to the foregoing;
- Adding a new Sec. 5103.11 creating a foster care and adoption initiatives fund.

The plaintiffs in the present case did not challenge any of the foregoing provisions, aside from the ban on post-heartbeat abortions in Sec. 2919.195(A). Testing for prenatal heartbeats, for example, was required by preexisting Ohio law, and plaintiffs do not argue that any of the amendments or additions to that requirement violate the Constitution. Neither plaintiffs' complaint nor their briefing on the motions for TRO, preliminary injunction, or judgment on the pleadings, nor this Court's preliminary injunction order, Doc. 29, purport to find fault with any provision of SB 23 aside from the post-heartbeat ban section.¹ Hence, there is no reason these other important measures, such as the foster care and adoption initiatives fund, should not go into immediate effect. Yet this Court's preliminary injunction (Doc. 29) purports to enjoin "S.B. 23", and this Court's forthcoming ruling on the pending motion (Doc. 31) of plaintiffs for judgment on the pleadings might well continue with this shorthand, creating uncertainty whether the relief applies only to the criminal ban section, Ohio

¹ Plaintiffs do mention the downstream consequences of violation of the ban section in terms of possible forfeiture and adverse licensure action. To the extent these provisions are triggered by a violation of the criminal ban in Sec. 2921.195(A), enjoining the criminal ban removes violation of that ban as a basis for forfeiture or professional discipline by the state.

Revised Code Sec. 2919.195(A), or to the entire legislative package.

Most significantly, the preliminary injunction apparently overlooks the mandatory interpretive rule on severability contained in Sec. 2919.19(B)(4), which states, inter alia,

If any provision of this section or sections 2919.171 or 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code is held invalid, or if the application of such provision to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the invalidity of that provision does not affect any other provisions or applications of this section and sections 2919.171 and 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this section and sections 2919.171 and 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code are severable as provided in section 1.50 of the Revised Code. In particular, it is the intent of the general assembly that any invalidity or potential invalidity of a provision of this section or sections 2919.171 or 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code is not to impair the immediate and continuing enforceability of the remaining provisions.

In the interest of clarity and to avoid overbroad relief that would needlessly and improperly impair the operation of the many unchallenged legislative provisions, amici wish to submit the accompanying brief detailing these concerns.

II. FEDERAL DISTRICT COURTS HAVE BROAD DISCRETION TO ALLOW PARTICIPATION OF AMICI CURIAE.

This court has already granted leave at least three times, in this case alone, for the filing of amicus briefs. See Docs. 51, 64, 72. This reflects the fact that the allowance of an amicus brief “is a privilege within ‘the sound discretion of the courts.’” United States ex rel. Fry v. Health Alliance of Greater Cincinnati, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14963 at *17 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 26, 2009) (citing United States v. State of Michigan, 940 F.2d 143, 165 (6th Cir. 1991)). Accord Alms Residents Ass’n v. United States HUD, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 163555 (S.D. Ohio Oct. 3, 2017). See also Doc. 44 (Mot. of States for Leave to File Amicus) at 4 (citing cases). Moreover, the proposed amicus brief does not duplicate filings already submitted in this case. Further, there is no prejudice to the parties. Plaintiffs and defendants are free to respond to anything in the accompanying amicus brief if they deem it warranted. However, plaintiffs have no legitimate interest in obtaining relief against provisions they have not challenged. The state defendants, for their part, presumably have an interest in minimizing the relief this Court grants against them.

III. CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, this court should grant leave to file the accompanying amicus brief.

AMICUS CURIAE BRIEF OF LEGISLATIVE SUPPORTERS OF SB 23 REGARDING THE SCOPE OF RELIEF

Amici are Representatives Ronald Hood and Candice Keller, lead sponsors of the House version of Senate Bill 23, the legislation that became the Human Rights and Heartbeat Protection Act, and supporters of the final, adopted Senate version. Rep. Keller was also a cosponsor of SB 23. Amici urge this Court to clarify that the relief it has granted, and will grant, applies only to the criminal ban on abortions after detection of fetal heartbeat in Ohio Revised Code Sec. 2919.195(A). SB 23 contains over a dozen different provisions, while the challenge by plaintiffs focuses on just one of them, namely the criminal ban on post-heartbeat abortions. Yet the preliminary injunction this Court entered (Doc. 29) enjoins “S.B. 23” without distinguishing the various provisions such as the creation of a legislative committee on adoption or new abortion reporting requirements. Moreover, this Court has currently pending before it plaintiffs’ motion for judgment on the pleadings (Doc. 31), and if this Court grants that motion, it might be tempted to use the shorthand “S.B. 23” again in describing any relief granted. Given the fact that SB 23 consists of far more than the ban section of Sec. 2919.195(A), this Court should specify in any relief granted precisely what provision, if any, the injunction or judgment affects. Further, this Court should clarify or modify the current preliminary injunction (Doc. 29) to make clear just what is enjoined.

I. SB 23 CONTAINED MULTIPLE PROVISIONS ASIDE FROM THE CRIMINAL PROHIBITION WHICH PLAINTIFFS CHALLENGE.

Senate Bill 23 is the legislation that became the Human Rights and Heartbeat Protection Act, only a part of which plaintiffs challenge in this litigation. The legislation in question (<https://www.legislature.ohio.gov/legislation/legislation-summary?id=GA133-SB-23>), contained various legislative provisions, including:

- Consultation re: state informed consent materials Amending Sec. 2317.56(C)(2) to remove the special privilege of the private organization ACOG having a mandatory consultation role in the formulation of informed consent materials for abortion;
- Reporting requirements Amending Sec. 2919.171(A) & (D) regarding reporting requirements for abortions in Ohio;
- Definitions, severability, reviving provisions Amending Sec. 2919.19's definition section and adding provisions regarding severability and the resuscitation of provisions should judicial abortion rules relax in future decisions;
- Limit to intrauterine pregnancies Adding a new Sec. 2919.191 to limit the reach of the bill to intrauterine pregnancies;
- Rules and methods for determining fetal heartbeat Renumbering prior Sec. 2919.191 as 2919.192 and in that section adding mandates for the director of health regarding rules for determining the presence of a fetal heartbeat and amending the law governing the methods for determining the presence of a fetal heartbeat to enhance accuracy;
- Recordkeeping for heartbeat testing Replacing prior Sec. 2919.191(B) with a new and amended Sec. 2919.193 requiring testing for the presence of a fetal heartbeat prior to any abortion (except in case of medical emergency) and specifying recordkeeping requirements;

- Written informed consent form Renumbering Sec. 2919.192 as 2919.194 and amending this section on informed consent to require the pregnant woman to sign a form acknowledging receipt of the information;
- Criminal ban on post-heartbeat abortions and statement against implied repeals Adding a new Sec. 2919.195 to ban abortions after detection of a fetal heartbeat (except in case of medical emergency) and specifying that this provision does not repeal or limit other abortion restrictions;
- Reporting whether abortion is done for health reasons Adding a new Sec. 2919.196 requiring reporting on whether the abortion is done for maternal health (or not);
- Exclusion of contraceptives Adding a new Sec. 2919.197 explicitly excluding contraceptive measures from the scope of the law;
- Private civil remedy Adding a new Sec. 2919.199 creating a civil remedy for post-abortion women;
- Adoption committee Adding a new Sec. 2919.1910 creating a joint legislative committee on adoption;
- Medical Board Forfeitures Adding a new Sec. 2919.1912 authorizing the state medical board to impose forfeitures for violations of various of the foregoing provisions;
- Conforming text of medical discipline law Amending Sec. 4731.22(B)(47) to conform to the foregoing;

- Adoption/foster care initiatives Adding a new Sec. 5103.11 creating a foster care and adoption initiatives fund.

The plaintiffs in the present case challenged the ban on post-heartbeat abortions in Sec. 2919.195(A) and none of the other foregoing provisions. While referring to SB 23 as “the Ban”, Complaint (Doc. 1) ¶1, id. ¶27 n.3, the plaintiffs’ complaint only articulates legal objections to the criminal prohibition on post-heartbeat abortions. See id. ¶3 (“Specifically, the Ban makes it a crime to perform an abortion after detection of cardiac activity”); id. ¶27 (“If there is cardiac activity, the Ban makes it a crime to [abort]”); id. ¶28 (“The Ban has only two very limited exceptions”); id. ¶¶45-46 (allegations of “prohibit[ing] and “ban[ning]”). Count 1, the only count in the original complaint, focuses on “prohibiting abortion prior to viability,” id. ¶60. The latest supplemental complaint, which adds a challenge to recent COVID-19 measures, repeats the same allegations against SB 23. See Supplement to Verified Complaint (Doc. 48) ¶1, 5-6, 31-33, 66, 85.

While the complaints mention some other provisions of SB 23, e.g., Complaint (Doc. 1) ¶27 n.3 (noting legislative instruction to Department of Health regarding adoption of rules on testing for fetal heartbeat); ¶29 (mentioning possible state assessment of forfeiture and state imposition of licensure consequences,¹ as well as potential civil suits by patients²), plaintiffs do not purport to find fault with any other provision of SB 23 aside from the criminal ban in Sec. 2919.195. Hence, there is no reason there these other important measures should not go into effect. Yet this Court’s preliminary injunction (following the phrasing of plaintiffs’ proposed order, Doc. 2-2) purports to enjoin “S.B. 23”, and this Court’s forthcoming ruling on the pending motion of plaintiffs for judgment on the pleadings (Doc.

² A challenge to private civil relief in this suit would not be justiciable. See infra.

31) might well continue with this shorthand, creating uncertainty whether the relief applies only to the criminal ban section, Sec. 2919.195(A), or to the entire legislative package.

Importantly, SB 23 itself emphasizes the severability of the various provision of the Act. Sec. 2919.19(B)(4), states, inter alia,

If any provision of this section or sections 2919.171 or 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code is held invalid, or if the application of such provision to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the invalidity of that provision does not affect any other provisions or applications of this section and sections 2919.171 and 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this section and sections 2919.171 and 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code are severable as provided in section 1.50 of the Revised Code. In particular, it is the intent of the general assembly that any invalidity or potential invalidity of a provision of this section or sections 2919.171 or 2919.191 to 2919.1913 of the Revised Code is not to impair the immediate and continuing enforceability of the remaining provisions.

In the interest of clarity and to avoid overbroad relief that would needlessly and improperly impair the operation of the many unchallenged legislative provisions, this Court should clarify or modify the current injunction and any future relief. This would be in keeping with the teaching of the Supreme Court on the subject: “We caution . . . that ‘standing is not dispensed in gross’: A plaintiff’s remedy must be tailored to redress the plaintiff’s particular injury.” Gill v. Whitford, 138 S. Ct. 1916, 1934 (2018).

To be sure, insofar as the criminal ban of Sec. 2929.195(A) is enjoined, some other provisions will not be applicable to violations of that criminal ban. For example, forfeitures under Sec. 2919.1912 cannot be imposed for violation of a criminal provision that has been enjoined from taking effect. Likewise a medical practitioner cannot be subjected to adverse licensure action under Sec. 4731.22(B)(9)-(10)³ for violation of a criminal prohibition that has been enjoined. Hence, an injunction against those specific provisions would essentially be superfluous. In any event, aside from these sections, the remaining provisions stand independently of the criminal ban in Sec. 2929.195(A).

In particular, the provision establishing a civil remedy for women in Sec. 2919.199 not only is not challenged by plaintiffs – it could not be challenged. Federal appellate courts have repeatedly and uniformly held that a challenge by a potential defendant to a private civil cause of action simply is not justiciable. See, e.g., Okpalobi v. Foster, 244 F.3d 405 (5th Cir. 2001) (en banc); Hope Clinic v. Ryan, 249 F.3d 603 (7th Cir. 2001) (per curiam) (en banc); Nova Health Sys. v. Gandy, 416 F.3d 1149 (10th Cir. 2005); Digital Recognition Network, Inc. v. Hutchinson, 803 F.3d 952 (8th Cir. 2015).

Presumably this Court, in referring to SB 23, was employing shorthand for the criminal prohibition contained in Sec. 2929.195(A). It would make little sense to enjoin provisions – like reporting requirements or the establishment of a joint legislative committee on adoption – which plaintiffs have not challenged and have not alleged to have injured them in any way. Amici therefore urge this Court, to avoid confusion about the scope of relief, and to avoid the inadvertent issuance of relief against unchallenged provisions, to clarify or modify both the current preliminary injunction and any future relief to specify precisely which enacted legislative provisions are affected. While amici would prefer to have the legislation enacted in SB 23 take effect in its entirety, at a minimum the many valuable other provisions of this important legislation should be operational, and operational right now.

Ohio licensure law that make commission of a felony a basis for professional discipline. So if that latter provision nevertheless no longer poses a threat once Sec. 2919.195(A) is enjoined, by the same logic, the forfeiture provisions of Sec. 2919.1912 likewise no longer pose a threat once the prohibition of Sec. 2919.195(A) is enjoined.

II. CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, this court should clarify or modify the current preliminary injunction and any future relief to specify which particular provision or provisions enacted through SB 23 are subject to relief, so that the many other, unchallenged, provisions can go into effect.
